the power to end poverty

Your invitation to the RESULTS National Conference 2014

The future of international development is changing. From the increasing importance of new technologies in development initiatives to the revolutionary approaches of grassroots movements from Ethiopia to Brazil, new ideas and innovations are irreversibly changing the way people change the world.

Over the weekend of the 10th-11th May, top researchers, advocates and policy makers will come together at the RESULTS National Conference to examine some of these developments, the impact they are having on countries and communities around the world, and to think about where they might take us over the coming years.

We'll also be providing a full day of practical advocacy training on the 11th for everyone from first time campaigners to seasoned professionals, and organising a full day of face-to-face advocacy meetings with key development professionals from across the public and private sectors.

Highlights

- Top quality speakers from all over the world.
- A day of strategic advocacy training and workshops.
- Meetings with representatives key development agencies and professionals, including MPs and health, education and global funds teams from DFID.
